Joint Press Release

Industrial Park Lausitz Industriepark Lausitz and Rettungsdienst Niederlausitz deepen cooperation

Cooperation agreement strengthens collaboration at the interfaces between the emergency medical service and the industrial fire brigade.

Professional exchange, job shadowing opportunities and selected training programmes enable both organisations to learn from one another.

BASF InfraService & Solutions Lausitz GmbH, the site operating company of Industrial Park Standortbetreibergesellschaft des Industrieparks Lausitz, and Rettungsdienst Niederlausitz gGmbH (RDNL) are further expanding their cooperation in the field of training and professional development. To this end, both partners have signed a cooperation agreement. The focus is on joint activities at the interfaces between the emergency medical service and the industrial fire brigade. These include practical exercises, professional exchange, selected training programmes and job shadowing opportunities.

“We are pleased to further strengthen our already successful cooperation with the industrial fire brigade at Industriepark Lausitz. Joint training sessions, job shadowing opportunities and regular professional exchange enhance collaboration between our emergency response teams and help us to further improve operational safety and emergency medical care for people across the region,” says Tom Lehnert, Managing Director of Rettungsdienst Niederlausitz gGmbH.

“When responding to an emergency, it is not only the professional qualifications of the individual responders that matter. Effective cooperation at the interfaces between organisations is equally important. This is precisely where our partnership with RDNL comes in: we want to learn from one another, bring together different perspectives in training exercises and jointly review procedures under realistic conditions,” says Michael Krabbes, Head of Emergency Response at BASF InfraService & Solutions Lausitz GmbH.

Responsibility for the training and professional development of emergency personnel remains with each organisation individually. The cooperation agreement creates additional opportunities to combine existing expertise and diverse experience while jointly designing selected training and exercise activities.

Planned activities include practical exercises at Industriepark Lausitz and at ambulance stations, joint training courses and workshops, as well as job shadowing placements and internships. Different operational conditions and local requirements will also be taken into account. All activities will be jointly planned and reviewed by both partners.
